

ATI TEAS 7 Reading Exam 3 Quizlet

Section: ATI TEAS 7 Reading Exams • Total Questions: 10 • Format: Verified Q&A

1. An employee at a local coffee house is asked by a manager to clean the restrooms before clocking out and deliver used coffee grounds to the community garden for compost after lunch. Which of the following steps should the employee perform third?

- (A) Eat lunch
- (B) Deliver used coffee grounds
- (C) Clock out
- (D) Clean the restrooms

2. Which step in the recipe is specifically aimed at addressing excess moisture as a concern?

Ingredients:

1 block extra-firm tofu

1 Tbsp neutral-flavored oil, such as canola or grapeseed

1 Tbsp soy sauce

1 Tbsp cornstarch

Directions:

Preheat oven to 400° F. Remove tofu from package and drain. Gently press tofu between two paper towels to remove excess water. Cut into cubes. Add tofu cubes to a medium mixing bowl. Add oil and soy sauce; stir gently with a rubber spatula to combine. Add cornstarch and mix until tofu cubes are evenly coated. Transfer to a lined baking sheet. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes.

- (A) Gently press tofu between two paper towels to remove excess water.
- (B) Stir gently with a rubber spatula to combine.
- (C) Transfer to a lined baking sheet.
- (D) Add tofu cubes to a medium mixing bowl.

3. When evaluating an author's point of view, which of the following is important for the reader to consider?

- (A) The author's written use of jargon and informal language
- (B) The author's biographical information, such as date of birth
- (C) The author's success in achieving the purpose of their writing
- (D) The author's personal or business interest in the subject

4. Which one of the following credentials would increase the author's credibility?

What really sets this species apart is how they reproduce. Mourning geckos are all female and reproduce through parthenogenesis, where the mother essentially clones herself to create her offspring. However, their genes have the ability to recombine to allow genetic variation and mutation. Like many other geckos, mourning geckos lay two eggs at a time several times a year. The eggs incubate for 65 to 103 days.

- (A) A senior zoologist at a zoo in South America
 - (B) The head librarian at a nationally renowned university
 - (C) The editor of a prominent American newspaper
 - (D) A wildlife photographer for well-known nature periodicals
-

5. For which of the following situations would this advertisement be useful?

For thousands of years, several characteristics have been consistent across human societies around the world. Animal husbandry, agriculture, and artistic expression are some of the similarities all societies share. Another similarity is the mustache. So now I mustache a question: why have mustaches had such a notable presence in human history? Humans have been shaving for as long as there has been facial hair to shave. However, it is in the past several centuries that mustaches have undergone a more creative transformation. Now, there are many different types of mustaches. The Handlebar, Pencil, and Walrus are only a few of the many types known today. With just a sharpened razor and some mustache wax, the creativity of people and their mustaches can be endless. Though the popularity of the mustache in different cultures varies over time, it has certainly influenced other creations. In the 1800s and early 1900s, mustaches were so popular that a new style of drinking cup, the mustache cup, was created. The mustache cup had a built-in covering over the top so mustaches would not be touched by the beverage. A more recent example of the mark of mustaches can be seen by the first World Mustache Tournament in 2013. The mustache truly is part of the human experience. Due to its place in the human experience, the mustache is a symbol with varied significance: power, prestige, beauty. When one thinks of mustaches, one may think of a villain from silent films, twisting the ends of his mustache. One may also think of a respected leader with a mustache of prominence. Perhaps one may think of people with famous mustaches: Tom Selleck, Burt Reynolds, and Charlie Chaplin, to name a few. No matter what one pictures when thinking of mustaches, it is clear that the mustache has a substantial effect on human perception.

- (A) A St. Louis resident's water heater just stopped working.
 - (B) A Kansas City business office has a problem with mold spores in its ventilation system.
 - (C) A homeowner in Detroit wants to have a new shower installed.
 - (D) A commercial builder needs electrical work performed for a national chain of restaurants.
-

6. From the passage, which of the following perspectives can be inferred?

What is all this talk of cicadas lately in the United States? You may be wondering why the media has featured it, but in fact, the discussion about Cicadas has emerged about as predictably as the Cicadas themselves from their underground refuge. Let's get oriented with some background on Cicadas. What is a Cicada? A typical definition will at least tell you that a cicada is a large, loud insect with transparent wings, mostly found in warm countries. A more detailed response might also inform you that cicadas have short antennae and wide-set eyes that jut out, with delicate, translucent wings- and not only is the cicada loud, but few creatures make a louder sound. In fact, it is male cicadas that are the noisy ones, to the tune of 80 to 100 decibels, which is like the roar of a loud engine. This is because male cicadas make a strident high buzzing by vibrating two membranes on its abdomen called tymbals, effectively turning its body into a kind of echo chamber or drum. Female cicadas cannot replicate the buzzing, though they respond with a clicking sound when they are ready to mate. Although there are several species of cicada, mating typically takes place in trees whereafter the female deposits the eggs into the bark. When the eggs hatch, the larval cicadas, called nymphs, drop to the ground and burrow. They then live as nymphs for the most of their lives over 6 feet underground, with both male and female cicadas dying within weeks of their emergence from the soil. This is particularly true for north American cicadas, especially the Magicicada, or periodical cicadas, which regularly emerge in intervals of 13 or 17 years, depending on the species and the location. This is why talk of cicadas in the media is as predictable as their emergence in the U.S.

- (A) Cicadas and public interest in cicadas are global
- (B) Cicadas and public interest in cicadas are inspirational
- (C) Cicadas and public interest in cicadas are inexplicable
- (D) Cicadas and public interest in cicadas are cyclical

7. What is the main idea presented in this paragraph?

For thousands of years, several characteristics have been consistent across human societies around the world. Animal husbandry, agriculture, and artistic expression are some of the similarities all societies share. Another similarity is the mustache. So now I mustache a question: why have mustaches had such a notable presence in human history? Humans have been shaving for as long as there has been facial hair to shave. However, it is in the past several centuries that mustaches have undergone a more creative transformation. Now, there are many different types of mustaches. The Handlebar, Pencil, and Walrus are only a few of the many types known today. With just a sharpened razor and some mustache wax, the creativity of people and their mustaches can be endless. Though the popularity of the mustache in different cultures varies over time, it has certainly influenced other creations. In the 1800s and early 1900s, mustaches were so popular that a new style of drinking cup, the mustache cup, was created. The mustache cup had a built-in covering over the top so mustaches would not be touched by the beverage. A more recent example of the mark of mustaches can be seen by the first World Mustache Tournament in 2013. The mustache truly is part of the human experience. Due to its place in the human experience, the mustache is a symbol with varied significance: power, prestige, beauty. When one thinks of mustaches, one may think of a villain from silent films, twisting the ends of his mustache. One may also think of a respected leader with a mustache of prominence. Perhaps one may think of people with famous mustaches: Tom Selleck, Burt Reynolds, and Charlie Chaplin, to name a few. No matter what one pictures when thinking of mustaches, it is clear that the mustache has a substantial effect on human perception.

- (A) Some men possess harsh voices.
 - (B) Harsh voices are often associated with relaxed individuals.
 - (C) Women are perceived as less appealing political candidates due to their shriller voices.
 - (D) Not everyone is bothered by a harsh voice.
-

8. Which of the following areas of a textbook includes supplemental materials and additional information to the text?

- (A) Index
 - (B) Bibliography
 - (C) Appendix
 - (D) Glossary
-

9. Which of the phrases on the label serves as a subheading?

- (A) Trans fat
 - (B) Nutrition Facts
 - (C) Amount per Serving
 - (D) Serving Per container
-

10. Which letter sequence remains on the page after following the given instructions to modify a letter sequence?

JCKGABBH

Copy the letter string above on a piece of paper. Cross out the first and last letters. Replace the letter B with the letter Q. Insert a U after each Q. Switch the first and last letters.

- (A) CKGAQUQU
- (B) UKGAQUQU
- (C) HCKGAQUQ
- (D) QKGAQUCJ